

300148 THE MODERN EUROPEAN CITY (spring semester)

The course introduces the urbanization process of European countries during the 19th century. The main issues concern: a) Social Theories about the modern city and the urban way of life and b) the causes and effects of urbanization process in the urban space. Therefore, the course focuses on questions such as the emergence of new forms of social relations between residents of big cities, the existence of an urban way of life and the division of labor between the industrial city and the countryside; the horizontal and vertical expansion of the city, the creation of the first suburbs, the development of the public transport, the forms of housing, the integration or the isolation of immigrants, the social inequalities and the social segregation.

<https://openeclass.panteion.gr/courses/TMC282/>